

The Unfinished Standard Model

Prof. Pierre Ramond

Physics, University of Florida

Abstract

In this talk, devised at the time of the pandemic, I review the salient features of the standard model and its links with the universe. I discuss strategies for its completion- seeking new patterns in the ultraviolet, and devising a standard model of flavor. I then concentrate on neutrinos, their history, and their role as harbingers of new physics.